To include fields, track, toboggan run Council oks park master plan

By Lynne Locke

Upland City Council has approved a master plan for the Eleventh Street park which shows six playing fields for soccer and football as well as a jogging-exercise track and a toboggan run.

Dan Rowland and Associates prepared the master plan to coordinate 15 acres of playing fields and a five-acre general park.

City Manager Lee Travers termed the architects' proposal "very unique and imaginative" but noted the cost could run to $248,250 for construction of the five-acre section alone.

The five-acre general park, which will be separated from the playing fields by two rows of parking and some landscaping, includes three picnic areas, an open play area and a creative play area.

Highlights are the jogging-exercise path and a rock fort-toboggan area.

Recreation Director Fred Taunton said the jogging-exercise track would be a unique feature since no other Upland park has such a facility.

The course would include a length of jogging track interrupted at intervals with signs giving directions for various exercises ranging from push ups to sit ups and pull ups.

Taunton said the jogging speed and number of exercises would be varied to fit each person's age and physical condition.

The rock piles presently on the site "offer some unique possibility for development," he said and noted that the master plan would pile the rocks into hills, creating fortlike observation areas and allowing a toboggan run.

Taunton said he first heard of a toboggan run at a recreation meeting and said other cities have found similar runs to be "quite effective and highly utilized."

The toboggan would use commercial track and sleds with teflon runners. The slope of the run determines the speed, and the run would be quite safe, he noted.

High cost of park development is mostly associated with transporting fill dirt for the rock piles as well as cementing the rocks in place.

But, Taunton said the cost would also be fairly high just to remove the rocks and create a standard "manicured park." With the rockpiles remaining, the park would be more rustic than other neighborhood parks in Upland.

The 15-acre playing field section of the park would contain six lighted playing fields for use by American Youth Soccer Organization (AYSO) and Pop Warner Football.

The football group would use the field just for practice, but AYSO would use the fields for practice on weeknights and for games on Saturdays.

A major part of the planning effort was devoted to buffering adjacent properties, according to Travers who said, "There was considerable difference of opinion regarding the need for a wall or a landscaped buffer on the east side of the park site."

The final plan shows a 75-foot landscaped buffer zone to screen out the impact of noise and lights for homes at the southeast portion of the park.

The remainder of the playing fields would be buffered by landscaped areas so the site would be "self-contained and quite attractive," according to Travers.

The youth athletic groups will be developing the playing fields with volunteer labor.

In other park action at the Monday meeting, the council asked the city staff to investigate the possibility of using telescoping light poles at the Greenbelt Park.

Dewey Cable of Cable Airport had told the council the high light poles would be a hazard to airplanes landing over the Greenbelt Park area and asked that the lights not be used or that the playing fields be moved out from under the landing pattern.

Council members investigated the situation and agreed that tall poles, even with warning markers, might create a hazard for landing aircraft.

Telescoping poles, which could be raised during games and lowered at other times, could present a number of problems, according to Taunton.

The cost would be one of the biggest problems, he said noting that the cost could increase from $400 per pole to nearly $20,000 per pole.

The present poles are wood, but telescoping poles would have to be metal and quite intricate in order to work properly.

The possibility of electrical short-out is also increased because of the stress placed on the electrical lines by the stretching and contracting of the poles.

The council hopes to make a decision on the matter at the Aug. 1 meeting.

Honor puts Merriline Smith 'on cloud nine'

Uplander named a distinguished teacher

By Lynne Locke

Mathematics can be seen as a game, and algebra is "the most fascinating branch — like playing a game of checkers by yourself," according to Uplander Dr. V. Merriline Smith.

The associate professor in mathematics has been named a distinguished teacher at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, and the honor still has Dr. Smith "on cloud nine."

She has planned to "teach from the very beginning," so the award is especially important to the Upland woman. "I realized I had loved the students," she said but noted that until announcement of the award she hadn't realized her students cared too.

The award was surprising because Dr. Smith is not an "easy" teacher, but she notes, that is because mathematics is not an easy subject.

She characterized herself as "very demanding and not very relenting," and commented, "There is no way to learn mathematics in an easy manner."

"If you do it right, it's a demanding subject," Dr. Smith said and added, "You've got to know the stuff. If it takes 3-4 hours (of studying a day), then that's what you've got to do."

But, the mathematics teacher said, mathematics can also be enjoyable. She — and students alike — can feel the sense of achievement after working a complicated problem through to its conclusion.

And "learning something, really learning it is something to be proud of," Dr. Smith added.

She uses a combination of traditional and innovative teaching methods in her classes which range from college-level algebra to calculus.

Classes include daily homework, weekly quizzes, and routine exams, but they also include diagrams, pictures and models, all to help students grasp the ideas which are being introduced.

What is the secret of teaching? "I take no credit for teaching them anything. The most I can do is share with them everything I know," she said noting that in the end it comes down to the student's desire to learn.

Dr. Smith's field of expertise is algebra and each year she has a few graduate students who study advanced problems in algebra under her direction.

Some of the algebraic systems have practical applications, but she noted all of mathematics is expanding and some theories do not yet have practical uses.

One of the "games" mathematics "plays with society" is the unevenness of the development of mathematical thought.

Dr. Smith said sometimes theories are developed years before science invents the process that will use the theory. In other cases the process is developed first and points the way toward formulation of a new theory.

Dr. Smith notes that mathematicians come in all kinds from pure researchers to game players like herself.

Mathematics can be considered an art because of its intricacies, or the ultimate science because it is so logical, she said noting that mathematics is also a "foreign" language anyone must learn in order to use it, and a tool for scientists.

But her own view of mathematics is that it is a game with logical but complicated rules. "You have to know the rules and use logical thinking to apply the rules in order to win," she said.

Like a game of strategy, there are several ways to solve a mathematical problem. A mathematician must know the various ways and decide which one to use, Dr. Smith said noting that the shortest way may be the most hazardous in terms of possible errors.

Mathematicians can learn shortcuts but the best way is the one that results in the fewest number of mistakes rather than the fastest way, she noted and added, "Mathematics is building up your bag of tricks. Being a better mathematician is being able to pull out the right trick."

She earned her BA in mathematics from California State College, San Bernardino and both her MA and PhD in mathematics from the University of California, Riverside.

Dr. Smith is member of the school of science's reappointment, tenure and promotion committee and the American Mathematical Society.

The 1976-77 distinguished professors were chosen by a special committee of colleagues whose decisions were based upon input from students, faculty and alumni.

The contract is a joint venture between the 10 United Ways in San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

According to the two executive directors, the 10 United Ways agreed by contract to pay the American Cancer Society a total of $153,750 during the 1978 calendar year.

The West End United Way will only have to raise $1,777 of the total $153,750.

Mrs. Thomas Gibson, president of the West End Unit of the San Bernardino County American Cancer Society, said the Cancer Society will continue to conduct its annual door-to-door campaign in April, but will not solicit contributions on a door-to-door basis from those people who display the "We Give" stickers customarily distributed to givers in the annual United Way campaign. The Cancer Society also will continue to accept memorial contributions and hold special fund-raising events throughout the year. These will not be a part of the $153,750 guarantee from the United Ways of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties.

Homer Briggs, chairman of the 1977-78 West End United Way campaign, said the contract is another step by the United Ways to unify the communities in a joint fund-raising effort which will be beneficial both to the United Ways and the American Cancer Society. He expressed his pleasure in knowing the contract negotiations are now formally completed.

This year's West End United Way campaign will kick off on Sept. 15 and continue through the month of November.

Supervisors ok record $300 million budget

By PETER WONG

After a round of self-congratulations for making it possible to cut the county's property tax rate by 10 per cent, county supervisors adopted a record $300.1 million budget Monday.

The supervisors urged other local governments to cut their budgets and reduce their tax rates, which would compensate somewhat for record increases in property values and the assessments on which those taxes are based.

The county budget for the year which began July 1 is still 18.8 per cent greater than the $252.6 million approved a year ago, when the supervisors faced a serious financial crisis.

However, because of increases in property assessments which averaged 18.5 per cent countywide and actions by the supervisors themselves — including $1.7 million in budget cuts and $1.3 million to be spent from a surplus higher than expected — the property tax rate will drop anyway.

Actual county spending for this year will be $322.7 million, compared with $274.2 million last year. The regular budget in each year accounts for only $3 million of the operating costs of the county medical center in San Bernardino — the county's direct contribution.

The center, which is budgeted separately, is financed largely by the federal Medicare program, the state's Medi-Cal program, insurance payments and private patients.

When the supervisors formally set the county's property tax rate next month, they plan to cut it from the present $3 per $100 of assessed valuation to $2.70.

The lower tax rate is expected to produce $69.8 million for county government operations in the next year, compared with the $65.6 million raised by the $3 rate in the past year, an increase of 6.3 per cent.

Property tax revenue accounts for about 25 per cent of county government's income. The rest comes from state and federal grants and other revenue, including charges for county services.

Noting that county government keeps only 25 per cent of property tax revenue and that cities, school districts and other special-purpose governments get the rest, Supervisors' Chairman Robert O. Townsend of Chino said:

"All taxing agencies within the county should take a very hard look at their spending before they set their new tax rates ... because they could have a substantial impact upon the dollars which all taxpayers pay."

Although he conceded that increased assessments will drive up home owners' tax bills anyway, Townsend said local governments could cut budgets and reduce tax rates so as to limit their impact "to a very, very small increase."

The supervisors congratulated themselves on doing just that in five days of public hearings last week on the $286.8 million budget presented by County Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin.

(Additional revenue, mostly from federal public works and emergency employment programs and a higher-than-expected surplus, pushed the final budget total to $300.1 million.)

Supervisor Robert L. Hammock of San Bernardino declared that the budget sessions were "the most gratifying five days I've spent" as a public official but expressed concern that other local governments won't cut their budgets and tax rates proportionately.

Neither Hammock nor Supervisor Joseph Kamansky of Upland would identify the local governments, though Kamansky's remarks appeared to be aimed at the Ontario-Montclair School District and the Chaffey Community College District.

"I am a little bit upset in my district, where recently I had two school districts, one saying they might have to go up 24 cents, another one said they're fighting to cut .7 of one cent, that they might find a way to do that," Kamansky said.

The financing formula for school districts is far more complex than for county government, and districts are awaiting action by the state legislature on measures that would alter that financing.

Supervisor James L. Mayfield of Apple Valley noted that additional property tax revenue required to operate county government in the next year will be less than 8 per cent over the previous year — a limitation the legislature is considering for all local governments.

Pointing out that of the $4.1 million in additional property tax revenue to be raised this year, $2.3 million will go directly to Sacramento as the county's increased contribution to three state-operated programs, Mayfield said:

"We should be sending a message to legislators that while we'll accept an 8 per cent cap, we can't do it if they're going to impose an 18.5 per cent increase in their share of the mandated programs."

Actually, Mayfield referred to three programs — Medi-Cal, adult welfare and crippled children's aid — which are financed partly by what Goodwin described as "a form of state property tax" within the county's property tax rate.

That tax rate is fixed at 58.8 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, and because assessments rose an average of 18.5 per cent in the past year, the county's contribution to those programs increased by the same percentage, from $12.5 million to $14.8 million.

The property tax revenue for all other programs will go up by 3.5 per cent, from $53.1 million to about $55 million, Goodwin added.

Of state-mandated programs, which are established by the legislature and administered by the county, Supervisor Dennis L. Hansberger suggested that a closer watch be kept on them to measure their cost impact on local property taxpayers.

Coffees planned

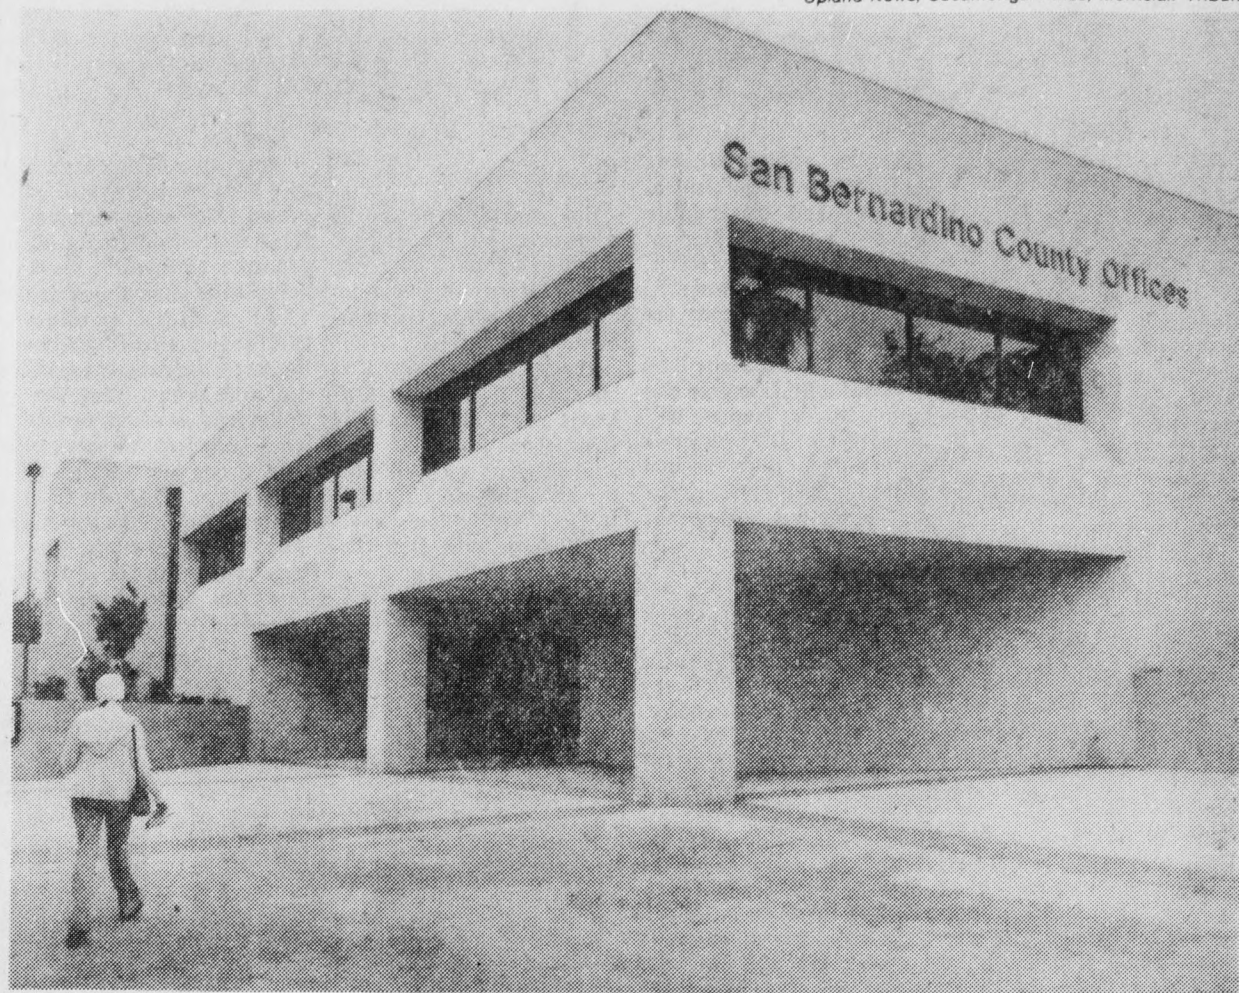

Summer coffees are held during July and August by the Chaffey Community Art Association, and members are welcome to bring guests.

The purposes of the gatherings are for members in different neighborhoods to become better acquainted, and to learn more about the Chaffey Community Art Association, the services and programs of the organization. At each coffee, a demonstration is given in the various art medias.

Coffees are scheduled as follows: Thursday, July 28, 7:30 to 9 p.m. with Vi Kallweit as hostess, and the demonstration will be weaving by Gretchen Gilbert with the meeting being held at 7639 Alta Cuesta, Cucamonga; Wednesday, Aug. 3, 10:30 a.m. to noon, with Mrs. Fred Maurer as hostess, 423 E. Princeton St., Ontario, with Clint Bryant talking on photography; and Monday, Aug. 29, 10:30 to noon, with Mrs. Alan Palmer, hostess, at 2416 Park Blvd., Upland, with her talking and giving a painting demonstration.

Tennis classic

Sun visors will be one of the items given each participant in the Sunny Skies Tennis Classic on July 23 at the Claremont Tennis Club, 2225 Padua Ave., Claremont.

NEW COUNTY COMPLEX — This view of the new San Bernardino County branch office building in downtown Ontario shows the overhanging roof which provides some shelter for the building's west entrance. The new complex, serving the West End, recently opened to the public.

$9.7 million contract awarded

An Upland firm received a $9.7 million contract Tuesday to construct four miles of flood control channel for Cucamonga Creek from Remington Avenue north to the Pomona Freeway.

The $9,681,471 contract, awarded by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, will include a $2 million payroll to employ close to 200 workers during the peak of construction, according to Armand DeWeese, vice president of Pascal and Ludwig, Inc.

DeWeese said the flood control project would replace the improved earth channel with a wider, deeper concrete section for the four miles.

The project will include a sub-draining system beneath the concrete as well as side drains.

Relief in sight

If county supervisors are successful in cutting the county government's property tax rate by 10 per cent, West End homeowners will get some relief from higher taxes, but not enough to compensate for record increases in property values — and the assessments on which those taxes are based.

The present tax rate is $3 per $100 of assessed valuation. The supervisors hope to cut that by 30 cents, to $2.70. A final tax rate to finance county government for the year which began July 1 won't be set until next month.

If a home valued at $50,000 wasn't reappraised upwards this year, the owner's share of county government costs would drop from the $322.86 under the present tax rate to $290.25, a 10 per cent cut.

However, had that same home been reappraised this year by 20 per cent (slightly above the countywide average of 18.5 per cent) to $60,000, the owner would pay $357.75 to support county government, an increase of 10.8 per cent despite the lower tax rate.

But if the tax rate were left unchanged at $3, its level for the past five years, that homeowner would pay $397.95 to help run county government, up by 23.3 per cent over the previous year.

Insurance discrimination

Dear Anita,
My company has seven employees — two of them women. An insurance company tells me a group medical insurance plan will cost the women $500 more per month than the men. Who has jurisdiction over such blatant discrimination against women in the insurance field?
L.A., Concord
Dear L.S.,
You should contact the California Department of Insurance Consumer Affairs Division — Policy Services Bureau which has offices in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Sacramento. This agency can file discrimination complaints under existing law.
Unfortunately, the insurance industry has a dismal record in treatment of women. Higher rates are charged women for every type of insurance: disability, life, medical and automobile. National studies show that some companies charge women twice the rates charged men.

Recently many states have made it clear that they are dissatisfied with a number of discriminatory practices of these companies: how they insure customers, how they set their rates, and how they make up employee packages for companies.
Since state governments regulate the industry, the rules can be changed state by state. Despite the U.S. Supreme Court decision in December that companies could omit pregnancy from benefit plans, individual states can include it.

Some insurance companies are taking responsibility to equalize laws. The National Association of Insurance Commissioners has recommended that states ban sex bias in many areas.
California has been a leader in providing pregnancy benefits. But many women are still running into discriminatory practices such as you experiences.
Anita Miller

Dear Anita,
Did you ever hear of a "working father." Or are men who don't help with household chores "unemployed fathers?"

These questions sound silly, but I think it's equally silly to refer to women with paid jobs as "working mothers." What's your opinion?
M.J., Anaheim
Dear M.J.,
If we think back to our own fathers, many of us remember men who helped with household chores as a matter of course. During the great depression, everyone had to work of course. During the great depression, everyone had to work together to survive. I don't think there was much of a distinction between the kind of work family members did.
Nowadays, a woman is called a "working mother" when she works for pay outside the home. With only two children per family nationwide, women have merely transferred the location of their work. Working wives have moved into the labor force, contributing nearly one-third of the family income.

Referring to such women as "working mothers" encourages the idea that the mother alone is responsible for the children — for their health, educational and emotional needs.
In the past, fathers shared these responsibilities. Perhaps we are simply returning to older notions of fatherly care when we ask that husbands share such tasks.
Anita Miller

C.C. of L.A. wouldn't accept "no" for an answer when she applied for credit at a department store. Following are excerpts from her letters to the Credit Department:
— April 18, 1977
Dear Mr. Jones:
Since my separation, I have worked two years, saved $1,500 and established my own individual retirement account. My apartment manager will tell you I pay rent on time and my checks don't bounce...I hope you will give me a chance to open a small account.

— May 11, 1977
Dear Mr. Jones:
I have your letter refusing me credit on the grounds that I have no previous credit experience. Several friends told me your department store helped those of us who have not established credit. Being reasonable intelligent, I waited until I had some funds before applying. I have approximately $6,000 worth of furniture, a $10,000 life insurance policy, a one-karat diamond worth of furniture, $2,300 in the bank and earn $954 a month.
I wonder if many of your present credit card holders match these assets. I am not asking for unlimited credit — just a chance to prove that I am the honest, intelligent, hard-working person we both know I am. I ask you to reconsider my application.

— May 23, 1977
Dear Mr. Jones:
Thank you for explaining why I was refused credit. I have a couple of questions about your reasons (age, credit references, type of residence and credit investigation). Am I too old or too young? Thirty-two does not seem very old (at least not to me). On the other hand, it doesn't seem real young, either. (By the way, everyone tells me I look good for my age, some say even great!)
As to where I live — several people where I live have your charge card — now that I think about it, none of them are the exact age either.

Am I being discriminated against because I am a woman and divorced? Are you against women "making it on their own" — May 26, 1977
Dear Mr. Jones:
I would like to thank you for your help in my attempt to establish credit — you may be assured that I will not abuse the privilege. I shall be valuable to you as a goodwill ambassador. Apparently being a little persistent and aggressive paid off.

Watch what you eat

By Helen Eza
Are you good at investing?

When most of us hear or think of investing we automatically think of money. True, we are constantly trying to better ourselves financially. Many of us are spending countless hours to improve our net income, be it through careful budget planning or manipulating our savings for higher yields.

Although most of us are living on a monthly salary or fixed income our daily investments are not always wise. In the budget planning we have to take care of the essentials.

Depending upon our income, we buy a home in a price range that is expected of us. The monthly payments are constant for the next 30 years. Property taxes are going up and the upkeep is costing us more every year. Californians are used to having at least two cars or trucks, his and hers. Car payments, car insurance, repairs and gasoline prices are going up and have to be budgeted monthly. On top of this comes the expense for clothing, recreation, annual vacations, and doctor bills.

We are planning for everything but the most essential and beneficial commodity — FOOD.

Most of your monthly expenses are constant and necessary, but are you investing your money wisely?

We are accumulating material things to enjoy and to make our lives more comfortable and secure. At the same time we are neglecting ourselves, our body, and are surprised that we don't feel good. Why gather all these material things if your health is not up to par or falling and you can't enjoy them?

You go grocery shopping blindly. Yes, I say blindly. You pick up white bread, TV dinners which are pre-cooked, pre-done or pre-cooked and pre-done ready-to-serve breakfast, lunch and dinner. A bag or two of candy for snacktime, lunch or dinner desserts. Pre-sweetened artificial drinks for quenching the thirst; and if the family doesn't like vegetables serve them rolls made out of white flour.

You most likely buy ready-made cake and cookies. And what about the crackers? Is this how you shop? Well, you bought nothing but empty calories, food depleted of nutrients. You wasted your food dollar and you are far from a good investor.

Many people are becoming aware of health and now are building for health security besides financial security. Your goal should be to live and eat in such a manner as to put the odds more and more in your favor for continued well-being.

Better nutrition may not be spectacular, especially if you say "I feel fine." But how about the things that do not happen to you such as colds, headaches, indigestion. One day you will realize and feel that your hair is healthier, your nails are stronger, and your skin has fewer eruptions.

You won't get fatigued as easily as before. You will become less nervous and will sleep better, plus other improvements that are special just to you.

What does all this mean to the health investor?

Don't put your last penny in oil stocks just because that company discovered a new oil field. Don't spend your hard earned food dollar for "donuts." Buy your food sensibly. Buy good, wholesome food. Look at the labels. Avoid "junk" food. Buy and cook nutritionally. Remember: "You are what you eat."

Looking at the bottom line of your health investment, you may find that for the first time in your life you really feel healthy. Be smart, be wise and complete your daily investments. The returns will be measured not in higher yields or capital gains but in a healthier you.

Death penalty: a battle

By State Senator H. L. "Bill" Richardson
June 23 was an important day for Californians. Public opinion was the victor as 27 state senators overrode Governor Jerry Brown's veto of the bill to restore the death penalty. This is the bill Brown so pronouncedly vetoed as a matter of conscience. He wants a society where we do not attempt to use death as a punishment. As a matter for my conscience, I am concerned for the lives of peaceful Californians who want and deserve protection from murderers. As State Senator George Deukmejian (R-37) said, Governor Brown "has ignored the fact that murderers are inflicting punishment upon the innocent, and a majority of the people of California want a society in which the innocent are not being put to death." Of course, our publicly intoned governor deserves some credit. He would have murderers locked up for life. In that way, only innocent prison officials and guards would have to live with them.

Californians, indeed all persons, have a right to live in a society void of willful murderers. But there are those persons who argue that a death penalty doesn't deter murderers anyway — that it really provides no protection.

PUC approves gas rate hike

The California Public Utilities Commission has granted Southern California Gas authority to increase gas rates to offset higher cost of natural gas. In the process, a major revamping of rate structures was also directed "so that consumers may understand and relate" to conservation-oriented rates.

Gas service area. The PUC said it would consider a lower customer charge for SoCal Gas customers during the next purchased gas offset proceeding.

For small commercial and industrial customers, the PUC established a uniform rate at the same level as the highest costing residential tier.

For "interruptible" customers (those who switch to some alternate fuel in times of natural gas shortages), the PUC established a "rate closer to the cost of alternate fuels. This is to serve as a signal to those interruptible customers that the hard realities of gas supply and increasing prices are close at hand."

The major revision in rate design is the establishment of a five-tier residential structure through which customers with high usage will pay more per therm for gas than smaller users.

The PUC said it is adopting this plan now in an offset proceeding rather than waiting for a general rate increase because "given the gas supply problems ahead, and the rapid price escalation at hand, we should not wait to adopt effective conservation oriented rates."

Another important feature of the new rate design is the dropping of "density" rates whereby customers living in sparsely populated areas pay more for gas than city customers. Instead of higher rates in density zones, customers will pay a uniform monthly charge of $3.10 in the SoCal area. The increase is related to higher prices charged by El Paso, Transwestern, and Pac Interstate pipeline companies as well as by California gas producers.

None of the increase will be applied to the summer "lifeline" quantity of 26 therms a month. The PUC said it is adopting this plan now in an offset proceeding rather than waiting for a general rate increase because "given the gas supply problems ahead, and the rapid price escalation at hand, we should not wait to adopt effective conservation oriented rates."

Under the rates authorized, there will be no increase for a typical residential usage during the summer of 26 therms or less. For a residential usage of 35 therms, the increase will be 2 cents for SoCal Gas customers.

The rate increase becomes effective immediately. from one supporter of capital punishment when he called to sustain the governor's veto. That opportunity senator tried to turn the voting into a political game of "let's embarrass the governor."

Brown signs weapon bill

Who cares about embarrassing the Governor when innocent lives need protection from murders now?

Those who sincerely support restoring the death penalty had to remind the Senate of the solid public endorsement for capital punishment.

The bill has overcome its obstacles in the Senate, but the battle is not over. The Assembly must now vote on the override, and the outcome is far from certain. A recent UPI poll of the assembly reporting that override backers were two votes short. Who knows what stumbling blocks lie in the Assembly for the death penalty?

Time, however, is on the side of public opinion. The legislature has recessed until August, and the Assembly is waiting until then to vote on the override.

During the recess, most of the Assembly will return to their constituencies. A concrete public backing has brought the bill closer and closer to realization, but the time has come for one last effort. Californians must use July to reassert their support for an immediate reinstatement of capital punishment — they must let their Assembly members know that the bill has come too far to fall now.

The fate of the death penalty bill lies in the hands of the Assembly, but the fate of the Assembly lies in the hands of the public. As a matter of conscience, can you afford not to contact your Assembly member?

Two plays to be given at Cal Poly

"The Mad Show," a satirical musical revue, and "Accent on Youth," a sophisticated play in the style of Noel Coward, will be presented by members of Cal Poly Pomona's first summer theatre company, Wednesday through Saturday evenings, July 27-Aug. 20 in the Cabaret Theatre.

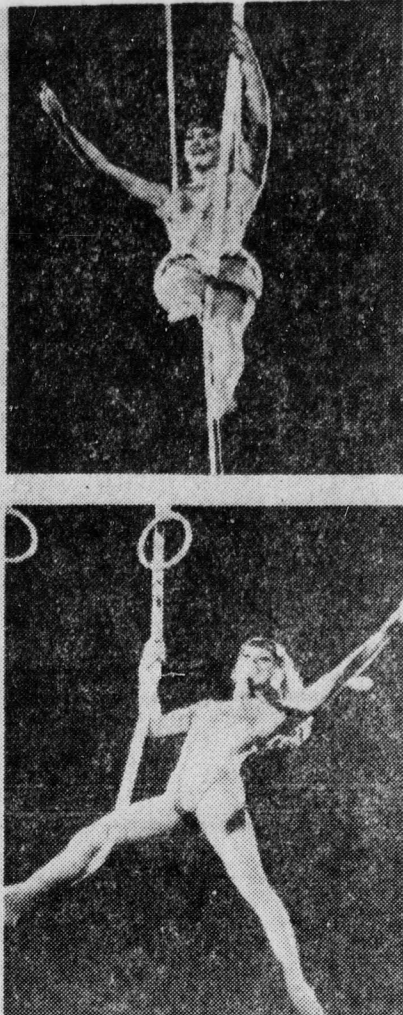

Written by Larry Siegel and Stan Hart, writers for Mad magazine, "The Mad Show" has been updated to reflect the humor and satire of contemporary American life. The additional skits and songs were written by Cal Poly students, Barry Moore, Wendi Radford, and Robin Clark.

Described as "lightly good - humored and pleasantly insane," in a review by Brooks Atkinson of The New York Times, "Accent on Youth" delves into the age-old question of Youth vs. Maturity.

The plan was written by Samson Raphaelson, who also wrote "the Jazz Singer," which was made into the first talking picture starring Al Jolson.

ON THE ROMAN RINGS — Dolly Jacobs will make her debut as a solo artist on the Roman rings through Aug. 3 at the 107th edition of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus at the Forum.

In San Bernardino County

Parks for summer fun

Summertime is ideal for family outings, an afternoon swim, and peaceful meditation under full shade trees. In order for the citizens of San Bernardino County to enjoy such settings, the County's Regional Park System has designed your parks with you in mind.

Just south of Ontario on Euclid Avenue is the County's newest park, Prado. Large turf areas are well tailored for a family picnic or friendly game of frisbee. Camping, group picnic areas and restroom facilities are also available.

Across from the Ontario International Airport lies a unique park, Cucamonga-Guasti. Equipped with a 3/4 acre sand bottom lagoon for swimming, Cucamonga-Guasti has become very popular with local residents. The park's main lake is ideal for a quiet paddle boat ride or if you wish to bait a hook, the lake has been stocked with a wide assortment of fish. The park is also equipped with picnic sites and barbecue grills.

If you're journeying out through Cajon Pass, stop in and say "Hi" at Glen Helen Park. Located in the hills of the pass, this 500-acre park has two lakes and offers fishing, paddle boats, picnic areas and camping. An ecology trail is also located on the park and is a favorite of all ages. Additionally, an equestrian center is located on the park, with miles of riding trails available to you.

Nestled in the Summit Valley is Mojave River Forks. Just four miles from Lake Silverwood, this park is ideal for camping in a natural setting while still being able to use one of the area's largest recreational outlets. The park has a 90-space campground, picnic facilities, and for hikers and equestrians, the park is located adjacent to the Pacific Crest Trail.

Near Victorville lies Mojave Narrows. With nature as its architect, this park has become a favorite with outdoor lovers. Offering lush plant growth, acres of waterways, and broad meadows, the Narrows is perfectly suited for nature study. Fishing, camping, boating, hiking trails and a specially designed interpretive handicap trail are all waiting for you.

Just past Barstow on the way to Las Vegas rests Calico Ghost Town. This restored historic landmark has all the feelings of the 1880's. Visit the Maggie Mine or the Mystery Shack, hike in the nearby hills or camp in Calico's 110-unit campground.

While you're visiting Calico, you might wish to see the Calico Dig. Located just 6 miles east of the ghost town, the "Dig" has become one of the most important archaeological sites in North America.

For those of you who like to water ski, swim, or canoe in the cool Colorado River, Park Moabi is for you. This summer, the park is really prepared for its visitors, as it just completed an additional 85 full hookup campsites on the river's edge. A marina is located on the park, complete with houseboat rentals.

For the serious student of nature, Morongo Wildlife Reserve has been preserved with you in mind. With over 200 species of birds and 150 varieties of plant life, this park has become internationally known.

Summer is an ideal time to take advantage of all the activities that are available to you in the County's Park System. From swimming and picnicking to a quiet walk among cottonwoods, the parks have been designed for you to enjoy. For more information concerning the Park System, write or call: San Bernardino County Regional Parks Department, 825 E. Third Street, San Bernardino, CA 92415 (714) 383-1912.

Fair to close Sunday

The lure of the county fair is stronger than ever. People who live in cities, like those who live in the country, find tremendous appeal in spending a day at the fair. The regulation old-fashioned good time is spiced these days with appearances by some of the top entertainers in the country — and all at a reasonable price.

The Orange County Fair, now running through July 24, draws enthusiastic throngs to the fairgrounds, which are located in the city of Costa Mesa adjoining the resort town of Newport Beach.

Fair visitors can make the rounds of nine active departments. They can watch watch some of the county's top artists demonstrate techniques in painting, sculpting and printmaking in the Fine Arts Department. They can see rock-cutting, china painting, wood-carving, silver jewelry being made, a potter's wheel in operation and many other demonstrations in the California Crafts Department. Pizza taste-testing is an attraction in the Home Living and Design Department, which is also highlighted by demonstrations of food preparation in many countries, displays of room interiors, a chefs' competition, omelets being made, rug-making and weaving and a host of other activities in the popular department.

The professor joined the Claremont theological faculty in 1967 following a three year stint as president of the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School, one of nine Bay Area institutions in the Graduate Theological Union centered on the university city's "Holy Hill." Richard Cain takes office at School of Theology

Richard W. Cain, who on July 1 became the third president of the School of Theology at Claremont, said he accepted the post because "the general church cannot long survive if it does not have the very finest training for those who are to serve it."

If he was to be an "ingredient in such a mix," he said in a statement issued his first week in office, he would like to be "in the most exciting place there is in the United States for the theological training — Claremont."

The new president succeeds Gordon E. Michelson, and comes to Claremont from Phoenix, where since 1962 he has been minister of the First United Methodist Church. There he was also active in civic affairs and became chairman of the Arizona State Ethics Board. At a farewell lunch in Phoenix, the 500 guests included Governor Raul Castro.

Dr. Cain was educated at the University of Southern California and Boston University School of Theology. The University of the Pacific, Stockton, gave him in 1966 the honorary Doctor of Divinity (D.D.).

He was Methodist district superintendent in Los Angeles 1962-1968, and is active on numerous national Methodist boards and commissions.

In response to the question, "Why did you accept this position?" Dr. Cain issued this statement:

"First of all, I am a churchman. I am a pastor of the church. It took me a long time to decide that I could be involved in anything other than a local church — first, because that is what I like to do; secondly, that is what I was trained to do; and thirdly, I am convinced that that is the most important thing to be done within the institutional church."

"However, the local church and the general church cannot long survive if it does not have the very finest of training for those who are to serve it. It was only after Claremont and other seminaries had indicated that perhaps this was the time that a person whose motivation, insight, and training, and heart is in the local church could be an ingredient to go into the mix of a first-class training situation, that I decided, and then it was I would like to try to serve. If I were to serve, I would like to be in the most exciting place there is in the United States for theological training — the School of Theology at Claremont."

"I am not a graduate of Claremont and I have been a trustee for only two years. So I cannot in any way be undergirding that remark with much personal experience. My conviction comes as one who has stood for 20 years looking at the School of Theology as a minister of the conference, as one watching its graduates, and one who has known its faculty and administration. I think, I come with a reasonable amount of objectivity. As a person who has been involved in the national church's life, I say it offers the finest possible training that one can have, to prepare to serve the church professionally."

"Let me confess to you that I do not know whether I can bring what will be helpful in terms of that mix."

But I shall certainly try with everything that I have.

"There is another reason why I think theological education is so important and why I am especially excited to be involved at this particular moment in the history of the world. The president of France recently said there is a drift to the left on the part of the young in Europe because of Western civilization's inability to meet their needs. I am convinced that we are at that very nexus point for the determination of the quality and the meaning of life, now and in the immediate future."

"We have come to the end of an era, philosophically, and probably institutionally as well. The only possible viable ideology that I think can serve humankind at this point is the Judeo-Christian faith. It is the only useable one philosophically and practically. Centers for providing the ideas which will make that ideology workable are obviously the seminaries. These centers are for those who by commitment, training, life examples, and service can move into the life stream. Their ideas will determine what life will be like. It is at those nexus points that I want to be involved."

"The last thing is this. We have a generation that is not the way some people have thought — quiet, defeated, and operating as if all things were inevitable. If anyone keeps saying that, I wish they could note what

'Honestly'

Way Out publication discourages theft

By Marie Toennissen
Shoplifting and other thefts are at an all-time high, with most of the thefts by employees and youth.

More important than the inflated prices to absorb this loss is the question: "What will become of the youth involved?"

Is there a way out of this dilemma?

"Yes there is a way out," noted Douglas Pond, director of Way Out, a youth ministry seen at fairs, beaches and recently adopted by Melody Land in ministry to homosexuals.

"Shoplifting has become a status symbol at many high schools across the country," he said.

"Students brag about how much they can take and get away with. Other students are encouraged to 'try it' and get a thrill."

Reports like this, Pond said, sparked the idea for a new pamphlet "Honestly," designed to reach young people with straight-forward talk about all phases of honesty with others.

The foldout was added last year to Way Out's roster of material available for youth ministry.

"More than $6.5 billion worth of products and goods were shoplifted in 1975 from all kinds of stores in the United States," Pond explained. "It happens in all phases of industry, regardless of the product sold. The really shocking fact is that more than 70 per cent of this amount is taken by employees of the companies. Shoplifting adds to the cost of each product, so we all pay for it."

The Way Out staff saw that honesty in general needed to be stressed.

"I feel that honesty is a question of morality," Pond said. "We at Way Out are interested in lifting the morality of our nation's youth, so we began producing 'Honestly' immediately."

Written by youth for youth, the pamphlet covers honesty from a wide variety of angles. Honesty in relationships, from friendship to family communication, and honesty in politics are discussed.

"Honestly" is aimed at junior high school, high school and college age youth. It can be used as a handout wherever young people meet, or at local stores where they shop.

Single copies for individuals will be mailed free. Cost of the pamphlet for local merchants or organizations desiring large quantities is 2 cents each or $20 per thousand copies.

To order copies or for more information about "Honestly" or other Way Out foldouts, write: Way Out, Dept. F.S., Box 2829, Hollywood, CA 90028.

Weight Watchers approve of hot dogs

Next time you enjoy a hot dog on a roll, you can thank Frau Feuchtwanger.

And who, you might rightfully ask, is Frau Feuchtwanger?

In connection with the celebration in July of "National Hot Dog Month" — Weight Watchers in Orange, San Diego, San Bernardino and Riverside areas served up some history of one of America's most popular foods as well as a series of delightful recipes.

Al Cutler, area director for Weight Watchers, enlightens us that not only is Frau Feuchtwanger the inventor of the hot dog on a roll, but that his famous "sandwich" is now "legal" on the Weight Watchers Food Program.

Well, it seems Frau Feuchtwanger's husband, Anton, a sausage maker in St. Louis in 1883, had a problem in serving sausages that were too hot to handle.

It was Anton's custom to supply a white glove when he served the hot sausage, so that the customer would not burn his fingers. As the cost of gloves climbed, his practical wife suggested that the sausage be served on a bun ... and a tradition was born.

The frankfurter on a roll didn't become known as a "hot dog" till some years later, when a sports cartoonist named T. A. Dorgan coined the term in the early 1900's.

The recipes prepared by the Weight Watchers Organization in celebration of "National Frankfurter Month" are as follows:

Open-Face Cheddar-Frank Sandwich
6 ounces frankfurter, boiled, cut in half and sliced lengthwise
4 English muffins, split and toasted

4 ounces grated Cheddar cheese
4 ounces sliced onion
1 medium tomato, sliced
4 lettuce leaves
Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Divide frankfurters into four 1½ ounce portions. Place half of each portion on each muffin half. Top each with ½ ounce cheese. Place on non-stick baking pan. Bake 4 minutes or until cheese is melted. Serve with remaining ingredients evenly divided. Makes 4 servings (2 muffin halves each).

Barbecued Frank-Kebobs
1 pound frankfurters, cut in 2 inch pieces
2 medium green peppers, quartered
12 cherry tomatoes
¼ cup prepared mustard
¼ cup red wine vinegar
Brown sugar substitute to equal ¼ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon dehydrated

onion flakes, reconstituted in 2 tablespoons water
2 cups cooked enriched rice
Preheat broiler. Divide frankfurters and vegetables into 4 equal portions and arrange each portion on a 15-inch skewer. Place skewers on rack in broiler pan. Combine remaining ingredients, except rice, and brush on kebobs. Broil kebobs 4 inches from heat for 8 minutes, turning once and brushing often with barbecue sauce.

Serve each kebab over ½ cup hot rice. Makes 4 servings.

Frankfurter Stew
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 medium green pepper, cut in ½ inch strips
1 ounce sliced onion
1 small garlic clove, minced
8 ounces frankfurters, cut in 1 inch pieces
1 cup tomato sauce, no sugar added
6 ounces cooked, peeled potatoes, cut in ½ inch pieces

½ cup sliced cooked carrots
2 ounces frozen peas
½ teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon oregano
Dash of thyme
Salt and pepper to taste
Combine first 4 ingredients in a two-quart, flame-proof casserole. Cook 3 minutes. Add remaining ingredients. Cover. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 25 minutes. Divide evenly. Makes 2 servings.

Weiner Omelet
6 ounces frankfurters, sliced
1 medium green pepper, diced
2 ounces sliced onion
2 tablespoons water
4 medium eggs, beaten
Dash hot sauce

Salt and pepper to taste
Preheat broiler. In a 10 to 12 inch non-stick skillet with an oven-proof handle, combine frankfurters, pepper and onion. Cook 3 minutes. Add water; cover. Cook 3 minutes more. In small bowl combine remaining ingredients. Mix with frankfurters and vegetables in skillet. Cook until bottom is firm, lifting edges with a spatula so uncooked portion flows underneath. Then place under broiler until puffy and golden. Slide omelet out of pan. Divide evenly. Makes 4 servings.

SERVING YOU OUR 16th YEAR

BLUEBERRY TREAT — Farmhouse Film Flam uses fresh or frozen blueberries and a yellow cake base.

Blueberry dessert

Film Flam uses yellow cake mix

June, July and August are satisfying months for the fresh blueberry fan since these are the peak times for this very special berry. Some like their blueberries for breakfast served in a bowl with milk or cream. Others turn them into fillings for pies and tarts or make jams and sauces to enjoy throughout the year on pancakes, waffles and biscuits. Here is a farmhouse film flam which is a quickie since it uses a yellow cake mix as the base.

Farmhouse Film Flam

1 package (18½ ounce) yellow cake mix
Grated rind of 1 orange
1 quart fresh blueberries, rinsed and drained
1 cup water
½ cup sugar
1/3 cup cornstarch
Juice of ½ a lemon
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Prepare cake mix according to package directions adding orange rind to batter. Pour batter into a well greased and floured 11-inch piepan, flan pan or fluted quiche pan, until pan is two-thirds full. The remaining batter can be baked into cup cakes. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes or until golden brown. Unmold and place on a rack. In a saucepan, combine half of the blueberries, water, sugar, cornstarch and lemon juice. Stir over low heat until sauce bubbles and thickens. Stir in butter and remaining berries. Cool and then chill. Place cake layer on a platter. Mound blueberry mixture on top of cake. Chill until ready to serve. Serve with whipped cream, if desired. Makes one 11-inch flan. (Frozen blueberries may be used.)
